

WestJet introduces Reykjavik to its northern European network

Nonstop service to Iceland’s capital is a significant step for WestJet’s expansion towards new and exciting destinations

CALGARY, March 10, 2022

Travellers are now closer than ever to stunning waterfalls and soothing hot springs! WestJet is pleased to announce the launch of new routes to Reykjavik, Iceland. This upcoming year-round service will take off starting May 4, 2022, and depart from the following cities: Calgary, Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal, and Halifax.

The introduction of Reykjavik reflects WestJet’s vision to expand its global network and to provide guests with more opportunities to explore breathtaking places now that international travel has returned.

“We are extremely proud of this expansion as Iceland continues to be a top tourist destination for Canadian travellers,” said Alexis von Hoensbroech, WestJet Chief Executive Officer. “With the easing of COVID-19 health measures, Canadians are longing to travel abroad, especially to countries such as Iceland with amazing natural beauty.”

Also beginning Monday, March 14, customers can book direct flights to Reykjavik’s Keflavik Airport (KEF) at special low-cost rates. This new service will operate three times weekly from Toronto and Montreal and twice weekly from Vancouver, Calgary, and Halifax.

“I am thrilled to see WestJet’s continued growth into the European market,” said John Weatherill, WestJet Chief Commercial Officer. “As the airline industry embraces the return of international travel, we look forward to bringing Canadians to exciting new places. On behalf of WestJet, I say, ‘Halló Reykjavik!’”

WestJet has also entered into a codeshare agreement with Icelandair which will provide guests with more convenient access to cities across Europe via Keflavik Airport. Thanks to this partnership, travellers can choose to visit Reykjavik as a stop-over destination, which has long been a popular choice for North American fliers.
